Cultural abundance, quality and diversity to make you marvel

Modern-day Saxony-Anhalt has a unique wealth of cultural landmarks from German and European history dating back 7,000 years. This legacy is internationally renowned: UNESCO has awarded five cultural sites, a biosphere reserve and various precious documents World Heritage status. Each site is significant in its own right, but together they shape the character of Saxony-Anhalt and its residents. They are also magnets for curious visitors from near and far.

For the first time, Saxony-Anhalt's UNESCO World Heritage Sites are now taking on a consistent identity worthy of their significance in the state's cultural scene. This new identity helps to raise the profile of the sites and Saxony-Anhalt. Joint communication will now follow one unifying central idea. The 6 Spectacular Sites highlight and give shape to the proximity and interconnections between the cultural heritage in the area. This title designates the quality, abundance, diversity and wealth of the cultural sites and emphasizes their unique, distinctive and captivating nature.

Saxony-Anhalt is the home of world-changing ideas.

With garden landscapes dating from the Age of Enlightenment, picturesque medieval old towns and landmarks in architectural history, Saxony-Anhalt has a rich and diverse cultural heritage. Revolutionary ideas that originated in these significant places have spread around the world – ideas that show that Saxony-Anhalt has always been home to modern thinking. This is the birthplace of the Reformation and the cradle of classical modernism. And on top of that, Saxony-Anhalt's UNESCO World Heritage inspires our future.

This statement of confidence is a recognition that our past has a future – just a handful of words that span the arch of the 7,000 years of history built on modern-day Saxony-Anhalt's ground, a link between our historic roots and our forward-looking perspective. This helps drive the state's #moderndenken campaign and realize future-oriented projects.

Saxony-Anhalt's World Heritage Sites are well worth a visit and are easily accessible. They offer experiences that will stay with you for years to come.

Three enticing UNESCO World Heritage Sites can be found in Dessau-Roßlau and Wittenberg alone: situated over an area of around 35 km, the sites are combined under the title Luther – Bauhaus – Garden Kingdom. Visitors can enjoy the economic benefits of the WelterbeCard to explore the art, culture, countryside and leisure opportunities that the World Heritage Region has to offer. The three sites are nestled in the Middle Elbe Biosphere Reserve, which is part of the UNESCO Elbe River Landscape Biosphere Reserve. World Heritage Sites sit on the wild banks of the mighty Elbe, alongside beaver lodges and wetlands. The symbiosis between cultural history and the natural world is plain to see elsewhere, too: Visitors to Harz Nature Park, part of the Harz, Braunschweiger Land UNESCO Global Geopark Ostfalen, can immerse themselves in a unique and diverse natural environment of forests, mountain meadows and mythical mountain ranges.

Anyone looking to experience UNESCO World Heritage in a beautiful tourist destination is in the right place in Saxony-Anhalt, where inspiring sites abound.

BAUHAUS DESSAU

The dawn of Modernism – at your fingertips

Dessau in Saxony-Anhalt is the city with the largest number of original Bauhaus buildings in the world. The most significant buildings are UNESCO World Heritage Sites. Opened in September 2019, the Bauhaus Museum Dessau is now another, more contemporary building to add to the list. The Bauhaus Dessau Foundation collection is being showcased here in its entirety for the first time. There is more than enough to tempt culture lovers and curious tourists alike.

After the First World War, a new era began in Saxony-Anhalt, marked by modern housing, experimental art and reformed schools. Radical innovations in architecture, art and design were being developed at the Bauhaus in Dessau. The Bauhaus was founded by Walter Gropius in Weimar on April 12, 1919. The architect's main project was to create a "building of the future" as a Gesamtkunstwerk. He made this project a reality with his designs for the Bauhaus in Dessau and the Master Houses. To this day, the buildings are seen as key works in European Modernism that set the trend for the Neues Bauen architectural movement. They are UNESCO World Heritage Sites, along with the Houses with Balcony Access, which are prime examples of the development of twentieth-century social housing.

Bauhaus at every turn: the School of Art and Design was active for just under seven years (1925 to 1932) and left behind a powerful architectural legacy. The majority of Bauhaus buildings are located here in Dessau and are quintessential examples of Bauhaus design. Visitors can discover these fine specimens of Modernism on tours or on their own individual walkabouts through the city. They can discover more about the buildings' architecture, what they were used for and the people who have lived in them and actively engaged with their distinctive character. The very buildings themselves are like exhibition pieces – their architecture, walls, façades and rooms hold the keys to the buildings' history.

The new Bauhaus Museum Dessau features an exhibition called „Versuchsstätte Bauhaus. Die Sammlung“ (Bauhaus Experimental Spaces: The Collection) that explores the workings and impact of Bauhaus as a university and how the ideas that shape our everyday culture to this day came into being. The exhibition displays over 1,000 artefacts from the Dessau collection, which is made up of around 50,000 objects in total, making it the second largest Bauhaus collection worldwide. The exhibition doesn't focus on the celebrated design icons and their masters, however, but on the school and its students. The themed sections focus on topics such as teaching strategies and classroom work, illustrated by mutual learning between teachers and pupils such as Marianne Brandt and László Moholy-Nagy, and Gunta Stözl and Paul Klee. The development process behind carefully selected Bauhaus objects serves as a means to depict the Bauhaus as a multifaceted place of experimentation, as a partner for industry and as a driven communicator.

The exhibition is supplemented by alternating displays on selected topics. The "Vom Sammeln" (From the Collection) display showcases new groups of objects from the Dessau Collection and objects that are not a part of the museum's permanent exhibition. The "Zu Gast" (Be Our Guest) array features curators, artists and objects from international Bauhaus collections and the "Im Experimentierraum" (Experimental Workshop) section gives visitors the chance to get creative themselves by trying their hand at small experimental design activities.

BAUHAUS DESSAU

The largest exhibits can be found outside of the museum – the Bauhaus buildings themselves. They are the common theme running through the town, from the popular Kornhaus tourist restaurant in the north to the Dessau-Törten housing estate in the south. Twelve of the buildings are accessible to the public, including the Bauhaus building, the Master Houses, Walter Gropius's historic Employment Office and the Konsum Building.

Visitors to the Bauhaus Museum Dessau can try their own hand at creativity by having a go at the small experimental design activities.

In the designshop bauhaus dessau, you will find not only books on the Bauhaus and the exhibition topics but also a selection of items in Bauhaus design, such as furniture, textiles, lamps, crockery, clocks and jewelry, as well as artefacts and work from contemporary designers, with a new theme featured every month. Special events are also held here such as intimate readings and concerts.

————— Since 1996, the Bauhaus building and the seven Master Houses in Dessau have been UNESCO World Heritage Sites, along with the Bauhaus building in Weimar.

The Houses with Balcony Access, built under the direction of the second Bauhaus Director Hannes Meyer, joined the list of World Heritage Sites in Dessau in 2017. —————

Get creative at the Bauhaus Dessau

School visits from all year groups are very welcome at the Bauhaus Dessau. It offers exciting, modular tours at various locations as well as workshops where pupils can get to grips with different topics in more detail. Alternatively, why not visit the Open Workshop? This is where children between 8 and 14 can print their own fonts, design letters and collages, make masks and create stop-motion animation films. The Open Workshop has plenty on offer for older visitors, too, who can experiment with analog and digital media and become absorbed in crafts, building, design and programming to their hearts' content.

Gardens, avenues, castles and Enlightenment ideas

The Garden Kingdom of Dessau-Wörlitz is famed for its superb landscape design, which unites art, culture and nature into one unique harmony. Visitors to the Kingdom can marvel at the many gems of garden design and architectural history throughout the 142 m² grounds.

The starting point and highlight of the landscape design was Wörlitz. This was where the first English-style landscape garden on Continental Europe was created in 1765 and where Wörlitz Palace was built between 1769 and 1773, which is considered the first building of German Classicism. The culture and history of the Enlightenment can be experienced here as if in a time capsule.

The Garden Kingdom was created by Leopold III Friedrich Franz, Prince of Anhalt-Dessau (1740–1817), who transformed almost his entire principality into a beautiful landscape through an extensive development program. His visionary landscape design is characterized by a diverse range of stylistic eras. Older grounds such as the Baroque castle, the Oranienbaum Palace Gardens, and the Rococo ensemble Mosigkau were all artistically integrated into the new Garden Kingdom, allowing visitors to experience cultural periods from Baroque and Rococo to Classicism and Neo-Gothic all in one place.

In almost all areas of his life, Prince Franz proved to be an enlightened monarch. In addition to modernizing agriculture and education, he introduced major reforms in other areas, too.

Wörlitz Park with its buildings and evocative flower displays is particularly spectacular. Visitors can go on an educational journey retracing Prince Franz's steps through the park, where Enlightenment ideals are quite literally woven into the landscape and where Humanist ideas can still be experienced today. A particularly spectacular monument is the "Stein" Stone Island, Europe's only artificial volcano (which is even active from time to time). With its caves, classical theater and the Villa Hamilton, it depicts Prince Franz's memories of his journey to the Gulf of Naples. The Gothic House is home to a precious collection of stained glass windows dating from the fifteenth to the seventeenth century that have been tastefully integrated into the building's window panes.

In addition to Wörlitz Palace and Wörlitz Park, the other palaces and parks are also well worth a visit. Known affectionately as the "Small Sanssouci", the Rococo Mosigkau Palace offers an exquisite painting collection of Flemish and Dutch Masters. Oranienbaum Palace, Park and town is a baroque installation built on a geometric layout, and a rare example of an ensemble of mainly Dutch character in Germany. The English-style landscape garden and superb classical Luisium Palace, which the Prince commissioned in Dessau from 1774 to 1778 for his wife Louise, is one of the most idyllic locations in the Garden Kingdom. The Georgium in Dessau is named after Prince Johann Georg (1748–1811), the younger brother of Prince Franz, and today houses the Anhalt Picture Gallery. Its park is designed along the same lines as the one in Wörlitz.

The most unusual garden structure in the Wörlitz Kingdom is undoubtedly the artificial "Stein" Stone Island. It boasts a classical theater, many passageways and caves with a Night Temple and a Day Temple, a columbarium, the "Roman Baths," and the Emma Villa. An artificial volcano sits atop the whole island. Prince Franz found inspiration for this structure from his visit to Naples and Pompeii in 1766.

The Garden Kingdom of Dessau-Wörlitz became a UNESCO World Heritage Site in 2000. According to the UNESCO World Heritage Committee: "The Garden Kingdom of Dessau-Wörlitz is an outstanding example of the application of the philosophical principles of the Age of the Enlightenment to the design of a landscape that integrates art, education, and economy in a harmonious whole."

Trips on the lake and canals

Gondola trips over Wörlitz Lake and the canals are a delightful way to explore Wörlitz Park – you can even go out at dusk!

Double the fun in summer

Culture on every corner and tasty food on the water

In summer, the gardens are unique venues for concerts, theater productions and musical and literary treats. Lake concerts in Wörlitz offer double the fun: visitors can take a trip out on a gondola and enjoy a delicious dinner while listening to music being performed on the bridges and banks. New this year - and a wonderful opportunity to explore the cultural landscape - are the concerts in the Oranienbaum Palace Park and the Luisium.

Garden Kingdom Day to mark the Prince's birthday

Experience events at lots of different locations

Events being held across the Garden Kingdom to mark Garden Kingdom Day in August encourage visitors to move from one spot to the next, experiencing this World Heritage Site in its entirety. The wealth of programmed events, some of which are also taking place outside the famous park grounds, highlight the diversity that the Kingdom has to offer in a truly memorable way. This day also celebrates Prince Franz, who was born on August 10, 1740.

THE NEBRA SKY DISC

Reaching for the stars in Saxony-Anhalt

The original Nebra Sky Disc is a magnet for visitors to the Landesmuseum für Vorgeschichte (State Museum of Prehistory) in Halle (Saale). The world's oldest physical representation of the sky is part of the museum's permanent exhibition. Visitors can immerse themselves in the world of the Early Bronze Age when the sky disc was made, as well as discovering exciting insights into other eras from the Stone Age to the Early Middle Ages.

This discovery of the century, along with its associated "detective story", the fascinating astronomic and mythological symbols and the glitter of gold beguiles every visitor. In 1999, two metal detectorists illegally dug up a bronze disc on the Mittelberg and sold it to stolen-goods receivers. It was not until 2002, after the disc moved locations a number of times, that the police located it along with accompanying artefacts in a Basel hotel, and returned it safely to the Saxony-Anhalt State Archaeologist.

The Nebra Sky Disc is the world's oldest known physical representation of the cosmos, which makes it a unique testament to human history. The 3,600-year old bronze disc measures 32 centimeters in diameter and depicts the sun – or a full moon depending on your interpretation – a crescent moon and 32 golden stars. Very few archaeological museum exhibits enjoy such worldwide renown as the Nebra Sky Disc. It has already been showcased as an exhibition centerpiece in Copenhagen, Vienna, Basel and Berlin. Since 2008 it has remained in the State Museum of Prehistory in Halle (Saale). It is well worth visiting the museum, but not just for its famous Sky Disc: it is one of the most important archaeological museums in Central Europe. The exhibitions at the State Museum show current research into amazing images, remarkable stories and artefacts of international significance. They present a realistic depiction of life during the Stone and Bronze Ages, with wild cave lions, formidable mammoths, contemplative Neanderthals, shamans, tombs and royal burial sites, and of course, the original Nebra Sky Disc.

If you are an astronomy or history enthusiast, don't forget this important date for your diary: from June 4, 2021 to January 9, 2022, the State Museum of Prehistory in Halle is presenting the state exhibition, "The World of the Nebra Sky Disc – New Horizons". Please note that visitors will unfortunately be unable to view the Nebra Sky Disc at the State Museum from November 1, 2020 to June 3, 2021, due to renovation and refurbishment works. But the wait will be worthwhile and visits all the more spectacular once the works are finished! The state exhibition in Halle will showcase results gathered over the past 20 years from research into the Sky Disc, interwoven with natural science, archaeology, social theory and art. The new finds and discoveries from Saxony-Anhalt will be supplemented by momentous artefacts from over 50 lenders from Germany and abroad, giving a multilayered insight into the world in which the Sky Disc was created – an age that we have more in common with than we previously thought. The British Museum in London is an exhibition partner and will display the Sky Disc after the large special exhibition in Halle has ended. The German Federal President Dr. Frank-Walter Steinmeier is the patron.

THE NEBRA SKY DISC

taking a closer look!

What exactly is depicted on the Sky Disc? Why is it the archaeological discovery of the century? And what's the "detective story" behind its discovery? Visitors can find the answers to these and other questions at the State Museum of Prehistory in Halle and at the Nebra Ark Visitor Center, on the site where the Sky Disc was discovered. This spectacular building, which resembles a golden ship sailing over the Unstrut valley, brings the history surrounding this archaeological treasure to life. Take the planetarium for example, the centerpiece of the Nebra Ark, where a 22-minute show unlocks the secrets of the Sky Disc and demystifies the astronomy behind it. The Nebra Ark is also a satellite exhibition location for the large state exhibition. The center's special exhibition "Looking to the Stars – From the Sky Disc to the Rosetta Mission" runs until September 30, 2021.

————— In June 2013, UNESCO incorporated the Nebra Sky Disc in the Memory of the World Register. This directory includes precious book collections, manuscripts, musical scores, unique objects, and picture, audio and video documents representing the collective memory of different peoples. —————

THE LUTHER MEMORIALS IN WITTENBERG AND EISLEBEN

In the footsteps of the great reformer

Would you like to see the history of the Reformation brought to life in historical locations? Then simply visit the Luther Memorials in Wittenberg and Eisleben, where Martin Luther and Philipp Melanchthon left their mark. Visit the Castle Church, on whose door Luther is said to have nailed his NINETY-FIVE Theses, (also known as the Disputation on the Power and Efficacy of Indulgences) on October 31, 1517. His words went on to change the world.

No other German state is so closely linked with the Reformation and with the life and works of Martin Luther than Saxony-Anhalt. The Luther Memorials in Eisleben and Wittenberg form a combined World Heritage Site.

Luther's House in Wittenberg is the world's largest museum of Reformation history. The former Augustinian monastery was home to the Luther family and the center of his work for over 35 years. This is where he wrote his Ninety-five Theses and gave lectures to students from all over Europe and where his legendary Table Talk took place. Visitors to the house learn not just about Martin Luther the great reformer and scholar but also Luther the husband and family man. The centerpiece of the house is the Luther Room, which has been the heart of commemoration of the reformer since his death in 1546. Guests from all over the world also come to the house to see numerous paintings by the masters Lucas Cranach the Elder and Lucas Cranach the Younger.

Melanchthon's House is one of the most beautiful town houses in Wittenberg. Elector Johann Friedrich commissioned it in 1536 for the scholar Philipp Melanchthon, who lived there with his family until he died. Visitors to the house can immerse themselves in the everyday life of Martin Luther's supporter.

Martin Luther was born on November 10, 1483, in Eisleben. The house where Luther was born features over 250 fascinating exhibits telling the story of the reformer-to-be, how he was raised and exploring his close ties to his parents and the region.

Luther died in Eisleben on February 18, 1546, while on a visit to his home region of Mansfelder Land. The house where Luther died takes visitors through the reformer's final days and hours. Discover how Luther dealt with dying and death as a believer, comforter and theologian.

At the Castle Church, which was built starting in 1489 and consecrated in 1503, Philipp Melanchthon gave his inaugural lecture. Legend has it that Luther nailed his Ninety-five Theses to the main door of the Castle Church, ushering in the Reformation. Martin Luther and Philipp Melanchthon are still buried in the church. Another highlight is the bronze epitaphs to Frederick the Wise and his brother Johann the Steadfast from the Vischer workshop in Nuremberg. Visitors can explore this history-steeped location independently or accompanied by an expert tour guide.

In the St. Marien town church, Martin Luther preached and Johannes Bugenhagen ministered as the first evangelical pastor of the town. This is where the tradition of Protestant church services held in German began, with congregational singing and the Eucharist in both forms (bread and wine). As a result, Wittenberg town church is also known as the mother church of the Reformation. It is also an art treasury with a whole host of works from the workshop of Lucas Cranach the Elder and Lucas Cranach the Younger.

After discovering the museum at Melanchthon's House, visitors can while away the time in the tranquil surroundings of the traditionally designed herb garden at the back of the house. Medicinal plants are also grown here, a necessity in any learned herbalist's garden.

Martin Luther grew up in the town of Mansfeld, where he spent his childhood and attended school, and received the education that was to set him on the path to academia. His established lifelong friendships here and discovered a love of music. In Luther's parents' house, visitors can see fascinating archaeological artefacts that shine a light on the family's everyday life. It's important to remember that Mansfelder Land is the region where Luther grew up: Eisleben is where he was born, but his family moved to Mansfeld just a few months later. His parents settled in the town, bought a house and set up a business. Wittenberg was the only place where Luther spent more of his life; having spent his formative years in Mansfeld, he felt closely connected to the county for the rest of his life. Visitors can take part in public tours and be transported back in time to Luther's childhood.

————— To commemorate the importance of the Reformation in world history, in 1996 UNESCO recognized the Luther Memorials in Eisleben and Wittenberg as part of mankind's cultural heritage. —————

Following the Family Trail in Luther's House

Go on a journey of discovery with Luther's dog Tölpel

There is a special treat in store for young visitors who follow the Family Trail in Luther's House in Wittenberg. Families can discover the House together with Luther's dog Tölpel as he leads them on an exciting and educational tour designed especially for children about life in the Reformation.

Getting involved: The Monk Did It!

Thrilling time travel for young visitors

This interactive exhibition is the perfect choice for inquisitive children. Housed in the Augusteum, the exhibition takes them on a time-travelling journey to Wittenberg in the Late Middle Ages. Guided by Luther's dog Tölpel, who is no ordinary pooch, young adventurers can follow in the footsteps of the monk Martin Luther on the fateful night of October 31, 1517.

Katharina's Kitchen Creations

Katharina von Bora reveals her secrets

In addition to the standard tours around the museums, there are also very special tours on offer, such as "Katharina's Kitchen Creations" tour complete with food tasting. On this tour through Luther's House and courtyard, visitors trace the footsteps of Katharina von Bora and learn about her everyday life with her husband Martin Luther. Discover how the Luther family lived, who lived with them, how they earned a living, what their marriage was like, what became of their children and, most importantly, what they ate and drank. Guests get to sample the tastes of the era themselves by enjoying culinary creations from Katharina's kitchen. There are also other themed tours on offer at Luther's House and Melanchthon's House, including "At Home with Katharina," "Cranach and Luther" and "Welcome to Mr. Schwarzerdt's Home."

Speak up!

Join in and learn how to become a wordsmith

The new interactive exhibition "Speak up!" (running until October 31, 2022) in the house where Luther died invites children, young people and families to discover language in all its glory. Embark on a linguistic journey and be empowered to be more confident and aware of the way you speak. Martin Luther's language has shaped the world: this exhibition brings his language and our modern-day language to life through experimentation, interaction and play.

Experience Uta's world

The four towers of the Cathedral of St Peter and St Paul can be seen from miles away, standing out in the hilly landscape between the Saale and Unstrut rivers. The cathedral is one of the most significant cultural monuments of the High Middle Ages in Europe. Its architecture, stained-glass and sculptural art are totally unique. The UNESCO World Heritage Committee recognized the cathedral's importance by awarding it World Heritage status in July 2018.

Visitors are especially fascinated with the cathedral's figures of the founders in the west choir, created by an unnamed stone sculptor almost 800 years ago. They are captivated by the statues' range of emotions: the various founders appear severe, vivacious, melancholic, sensitive, proud, bold and witty – staggering when you consider they were hewn from stone in around 1240 but still look so lifelike.

One figure is especially striking: Uta von Naumburg, looking proud yet enigmatic. Umberto Eco called her “the most beautiful woman of the Middle Ages” and she was the inspiration for the Evil Queen in Walt Disney's Snow White, making the cathedral famous throughout the world.

Their creator, known as the “Naumburg Master,” was also behind the planning, design and features of the cathedral's west choir and west rood screen – a masterpiece of human creativity. Inspired by French Gothic cathedral architecture, he brought his workshop to Naumburg in the middle of the 13th century and completed his magnum opus in just six years. This makes him an outstanding living example of cultural exchange during the High Middle Ages.

The two rood screens that separate the choir from the nave are another impressive feature of the cathedral. No other church in the world boasts two preserved High Middle Ages rood screens! And they still illustrate how the church was used at the time. The east choir was the main area for the liturgy given by the high diocesan clergy. The cathedral's Romanesque and Gothic artworks allow visitors to experience medieval liturgy in a way that is virtually unparalleled.

The cathedral's treasure vault houses an exhibition of more than 30 exquisite religious artefacts from the Middle Ages and the Renaissance, including St John's bowl from the 13th century, an altarpiece by Lucas Cranach and the unique Naumburg Pietà. Even simply entering the room is an experience – at around 285 m², it is one of the largest Romanesque vaults in Central Germany.

The permanent exhibition near the cathedral tells the story of the Naumburg Master's creative journey from France to Germany and gives insights into his work and career. Visitors can wonder at the Master's distinctive skill exemplified by his precious originals, consummate duplicates of the Bamberg Horseman and the Mainz west rood screen, model churches and manuscripts and at his deep ties to French cathedral architecture.

NAUMBURG CATHEDRAL OF ST PETER AND ST PAUL

taking a closer look!

Romanesque and Gothic united in one building. With its magnificent Romanesque artworks, such as the oldest stone sculpture of St. Elizabeth of Thuringia, its crucifix in the crypt with Christ as triumphator and the largest Romanesque vault in Central Germany, Naumburg Cathedral is the top visitor attraction on the Route of the Romanesque.

The cathedral boasts modern artwork, too. Two bronze handrails made by the Magdeburg artist Heinrich Apel adorn the staircases to the east choir. Artfully designed details, animals, plants and figures from the bible and classical mythology represent the arduous journey to paradise and depict St. Francis of Assisi preaching to the birds.

In 2007, contemporary glass windows whose central scenes depict the lives of the saints were installed in the Elisabeth chapel. These were designed by internationally renowned artist Neo Rauch of the New Leipzig School. On sunny days in particular, the chapel has an especially welcoming atmosphere.

In light of the whole ensemble, consisting of the architecture, sculpture and stained glass, the UNESCO World Heritage Committee declared the Cathedral of St Peter and St Paul a World Heritage Site in 2018, as a "masterpiece of human creative genius."

Step into Naumburg Cathedral
and experience UNESCO World Heritage

Get up close to Naumburg Cathedral's masterpieces

A cornucopia of art

Visitors to Naumburg Cathedral can experience world-renowned masterpieces up close and find out what sets the cathedral apart from other churches by taking part in public tours, audio-guided tours or treasure hunt quizzes for children. Tours of the tower offer visitors a change of perspective with fantastic views over the Saale-Unstrut region guaranteed and the chance to see the lifelike gargoyles practically head on. Exclusive and specialized tours offer unique and unusual insights into the Abbey Library, St. Giles chapel and the story behind the extensive restoration of the colorful, iridescent leaded windows. Visitors will also be blown away by the great beauty of the margravine Uta. The "Visit Uta" costume tour runs all year round.

Moments to savor

Experience culture with all your senses

Art and nature are perfectly combined at Naumburg Cathedral. The neighboring garden covering almost one hectare offers visitors an escape from the hustle and bustle of the surroundings. Nestled between medieval walls and bastions are picturesque ponds, blossoming flowers and the gardens belonging to the former canons: a real natural oasis in the middle of the town. But wine and art make for a delightful combination, too. Floral capitals decorated in exquisite detail by the Naumburg Meister reveal a great deal about the development of cultural trends and the significance of wine in the Saale-Unstrut region. The "From the Grape to the Glass" tour takes visitors through the unique tranquility of the cathedral garden and covers invaluable insights and fun facts about the role of wine at Naumburg Cathedral, topped off with wine tastings from local wine growers.

In the footsteps of medieval artists

Make your own masterpiece

Children, young people and even adults love to immerse themselves in the fascinating world of the Cathedral's Masons' Huts from the 13th century where they can embark on an exciting UNESCO World Heritage journey. Stepping into the shoes of a stonemason, glass artist or architect, you can get creative and make your own art works. You will not only get a greater sense of the phenomenal skill of these medieval artists, but also discover centuries-old secrets.

QUEDLINBURG'S COLLEGIATE CHURCH, CASTLE AND OLD TOWN

This is where German history was made

Quedlinburg boasts winding alleyways, half-timbered houses dating from different eras, medieval squares, modern art housed behind centuries-old walls, and the castle-hill with its castle and Romanesque Collegiate Church offering panoramic views: Quedlinburg is the only UNESCO World Heritage City in Saxony-Anhalt. The foreland of the Harz mountains is a living monument, and an attraction that beguiles visitors from all over the world.

German history was made in Quedlinburg over 1,100 years ago. In 919, on Finkenherd down below the castle-hill, Saxon duke Henry was crowned King. The precious objects in the treasury at the Collegiate Church of St Servatius still give a sense of the splendor and wealth of the Ottonian ruling dynasty today.

Quedlinburg was a high priority for the Ottonian ruling dynasty of the 10TH century. The coronation of Saxon duke Henry laid the foundations for the first national German state. He was buried in his favorite palace on Quedlinburg castle-hill in 936. The imperial Quedlinburg ladies collegiate chapter established by his widow Mathilde and his son – who later became Emperor Otto I – was one of the most important institutions of its time in the German-speaking world. Its noble Abbesses had great impact on the town of Quedlinburg and the Harz region beyond. Initially, the chapter's main task was to commemorate Henry I and other Ottonian family members. In the 10th century, Quedlinburg was even a metropolis of the wealthy, the domicile of the Ottonian emperor and the location for significant royal court days and synods. The castle on the castle-hill was the residence of the powerful Abbesses. The crown princesses governed their lands and estates from here, and for centuries, decided the fate of the town below it.

The castle and its collegiate buildings on the castle-hill are currently having a facelift. After extensive restoration work, a new museum of the history of the ladies' collegiate chapter and the World Heritage City of Quedlinburg is to open in 2023. It will relate the story of this historic place's great importance in German and European history.

Winding alleyways, picturesque squares and the imposing architecture of the castle-hill atop jagged rocks in the town center lend Quedlinburg a unique character. To this day, the medieval layout and much of the medieval building development have been authentically maintained. The cobblestones, alleyways and half-timbered buildings are steeped in so much history that visitors flock to see them.

Here it's worth
taking a closer look!

Not just for romantics: During Advent, Quedlinburg takes on a particularly inviting sparkle, with a host of events steeped in a Yuletide atmosphere.

Not a UNESCO World Heritage site but very close by – and worth a detour:

The Quedlinburg districts of Bad Suderode and Gernrode are strung like pearls along the edge of Harz, and both are within easy reach by the nostalgic Selke Valley Railway. The Calciumspa in the town of Bad Suderode, shaped by 19th century spa architecture, has been synonymous with health and wellbeing since 1826. In addition, the Behringer fountain is one of the most potent calcium springs in Europe and is mainly used to treat osteoporosis.

Three gems on the “Route of the Romanesque” – and a cellar church

West of the castle-hill and the Collegiate Church of St. Servatius, there are more exciting authentic Romanesque architectural experiences in store at St. Wiperti of the Valley and the remains of St. Mary's Benedictine convent on the Münzenberg. The crypt at the Church of St. Wiperti is over 1,000 years old, making it one of the oldest buildings constructed in this important ruling location of the Ottonians. St. Mary's on the Münzenberg was built in 986, used as a church until 1536, then during the centuries that followed, for secular purposes. It was later built over and converted into twelve houses. Today, visitors can explore the remains of the convent in the houses' cellars.

———— This medieval town with over 2,000 half-timbered houses dating across eight centuries, plus the castle-hill, became a UNESCO World Cultural Heritage Site in 1994. **————

and experience UNESCO World Heritage

Have you ever been in a Ständerbau?

Explore the history of half-timbered architecture from the ground up

This museum of timber framing, the only one in Germany, is in a tall half-timbered house, or “Hochständerbau,” dating from the first half of the 14th century. Half-timbered buildings are structured by vertical posts or “studs” that run from the foundations or even the ground sill all the way up to the roof. Visitors to this interesting little museum learn a lot about half-timbered architecture from the 14th to the 19th century, and how Quedlinburg's period buildings were restored and reconstructed.

Elementary knowledge for visitors to Quedlinburg

History in the old schoolhouse

Gernrode is home to what is probably the oldest elementary school in Germany. The building, constructed in 1533 and lovingly restored, is open to visitors. You can even take lessons if you like – right there in the authentic historic schoolroom. The schoolhouse also has a permanent exhibition, “Minerals of the Harz,” shows art exhibitions, and is a mine of information on the history of the town and the school itself. Small but exquisite: At story times, you can sit by the tiled stove and listen to fairy tales while treating yourself to a baked apple.

A ticket for the 1,000-year-old World Heritage City please!

Lots of tours, lots of discoveries – one destination:
Quedlinburg

Discovering Quedlinburg on foot is wonderful. The daily tour through this UNESCO World Heritage Site is the ideal option for first-time visitors. Listen to a guided commentary on its history and architecture, and on life in a 1,000-year-old World Heritage City as you walk through the Old Town and up to the castle-hill. If you prefer an evening stroll, the night watchman's tour is for you. Inquisitive guests are welcomed by costumed tour guides including the midwife, Mother Griebisch, the talkative maid from the monastery, the night watchman, his wife or the protector of the collegiate church. These historic celebrities are brimming with anecdotes and fascinating stories about Quedlinburg's past.
